

ABSTRACT

A switching system performs internally a terminal process for an AO/DI traffic directly without using a packet handler and includes a subscriber switching subsystem to 5 thereby communicate with Internet through a router within the subscriber switching subsystem. Therefore, the switching system simplifies an ISDN call process procedure for the AO/DI service and prevents a switching resource within the 10 switching system from being inefficiently managed to thereby provide much more subscribers with the AO/DI service.